Tambidao farmers show way to success

By Criselda Arcebas
Sagay, Northern Luzon

RICEDOWN, LA UNION—The Tambidao Multipurpose Cooperative (TMC) is a 100-member farmers' cooperative that was established as a pilot project to demonstrate that with proper training and technical support, farmers can improve their livelihoods under the Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program (CARP) in rural areas.

The cooperative, named after the village, proved the success of the 11 members in the village in the form of cash advances, said TMC president, Criselda Arcebas.

When the team gave the members their contribution to share up the loan, it was successful in the form of cash advances, said TMC president, Criselda Arcebas.

It was only in 1995, however, when the cooperative started to expand their services through the formation of Agrarian Reform Organization (ARO) in the village.

The ARO was formed by the Tambidao Multipurpose Cooperative (TMC) and the Tambidao Multipurpose Cooperative (TMC).

FOR THE RECORD

Over the past 20 years, Senator (Sergio J. Angara's) conscientious work in the Philippine Senate has benefited various sectors all over the country.

In his three terms as Senator of the Republic, since 1987, he has been a cut above the rest as an outstanding legislator.

Significant bills he authored have been passed into law and improved the lives of countless Filipinos, especially in the fields of Education, Health, Agriculture, Business and Finance, Culture, Environment, and Science and Technology.

Senior Citizens, Muslims and Cultural Communities also have reason to be grateful for Ed Angara's selfless strand of public service.

Eight and Counting

CONVERGYS
Outthinking Outdoing.
Build your Future at Convergys

There's a reason why Convergys Corporation has been listed as one of Fortune Magazine's Most Admired Companies for the past seven years.

As a global leader in providing the best customer care, human resources, and billing outsourcing services, the Cincinnati-based company has published a reputation as one of the pre-eminent players in the customer contact center industry. In addition to understanding the client needs, Convergys also makes it a point to understand the needs of its workforce. That's why Convergys offers its employees not only a well-compensated job but all the opportunities to grow both in career and personal development. The company offers the specialized training programs that build confidence among its employees to perform at a high level.

Of course, employees need offices, and fortunately, Convergys has a lot of them.

The first one

Convergys' first site was opened in August 2002 during the peak of the contact center boom here in the Philippines. Located at the 9th, 7th and 3rd floor of the Extension Tower at Makati City, the Convergys site served as a catalyst to revitalize the company's first office in the Philippines. Convergys has since been making a tremendous impact on the BPO contact center industry in the Philippines.

Convergys Extension Tower in Makati City

It was housing approximately 100 contact center workers but was not big enough to satisfy the increasing client demand for expanded capacity in the Philippines. This business demand brought about by the success of the company in the country also brought about the need for additional facilities.

Branching out

In September 2003, Convergys set up an office at the 21st to 26th floor of the Robinson's Equitable Tower at Ortigas Center in Pasig City. The move, matching with Robinson's Equitable Tower, houses the second Convergys site in the country.

Taking out from the old means taking the best while it's hot. Convergys quickly spread another site in the Philippines. Nothing about the company's commitment to employee training, that this site was established in the brand new building, right across the Extension Tower at the company's first site, in April 2004. The company occupies the 6th and 7th floor of the building, and unlike the first two sites, Convergys' location is not primarily a contact center. It was established to serve as the training center for all of the company's employees.

A lot of activity

As the company continued to grow, the latest acquisition of 2004 proved to be one of the busiest sites in Convergys' history here in the Philippines. In a span of four months, Convergys opened three more new sites, two of which were buildings exclusively built for the company.

Taking advantage of the rising business demand in Makati, Manila, Convergys opened a center at the Northgate Edge at the 11th to 15th floor of Corporate City in August 2004. The move was largely motivated by the company's desire to tap into the talent pool of people from nearby areas. People who don't want to travel to Makati or the other centers were immediately drawn to the new center, located right in their neighborhood.

In October 2004, Convergys opened yet another site. Located at the PRC's Tower in Makati City, a move to three sites. This was the third Makati site. The new Convergys site, situated on place to each other, served as a testament to how dedicated the company is to the Makati Manila area and to the Philippines.

Taking expansion further down south

In November 2004, just one month after opening the Convergys site at PRC's Tower, the company moved south to open Convergys' first contact center outside Metro Manila, a facility in Cebu.

The expansion to Cebu served as a testament to the company's commitment to having the best possible workforce. The decision to build a site outside Metro Manila was the perfect opportunity for the company to reach out to people who couldn't go to Metro Manila. The 2,500 sqm site in Bonifacio, Cebu was inaugurated from the 2005.

Two for '05

Seeing the opportunity in Cebu City, Convergys was quick to put a contact center in the heart of the business district. In February 2005, Convergys moved its site into a Congressional Avenue, Cebu City. Occupying the 2nd to 3rd floor of the Williams Congressional Center, Convergys was beginning to make its presence known in all corners of Metro Manila.

The facility in which Convergys was able to open its contact center was astounding. From April 2004 to February 2005, a span of 15 months, Convergys opened five sites.

Convergys Williams Congressional Center in Cebu City

This follow Convergys One Building located at Ayala Avenue, just down the road from the first other Convergys site in Makati, was opened in December 2005. With a total floor area of 14,250 sqm, it is the biggest Convergys site in the Philippines.

Twice as nice in Cebu City

This time, Convergys is once again heading to Cebu to open another contact center. This time at the Asean IT Park in Talisay, Cebu. The company will be occupying the 11th & 12th floor of the IT Building.

With the opening of the Convergys Asean IT Park, the company continues to broaden its reach and take its reach and vision of Cebu's future. The Asean IT Park will also give people from neighboring communities the opportunity to work for a world-class company.

Convergys believes in the Cebuans spirit. The backbone of the Philippine economy, Cebuans have to attract welcome at Convergys. Cebuans are also known to be hard and accomplished, something that is a great workhandling international calls.

By upholding a distinct Cebu flavor with business presence of Convergys, the company continues to prove without a shadow of a doubt that it will go to great lengths to give the best possible work life.

Convergys has been able to fill seven sites and one training center with outstanding employees and here's a site for they won't have a difficult time filling up right now. ■

Soldiers, DENR men seize logs from Sierra Madre

LAGUNA CITY—SOLDIERS AND AGENTS OF the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) National Anti-Deforestation (NAD) Task Force (NADTF) seized another haul of illegal loggers in Laguna province within their island of at least 1,200 board feet of narra (Shorea) timber illegally cut in the Sierra Madre, according to a report from a local environmental group.

Glenn Forbes, NADTF program officer, said a haul of logs from the National and the Army's 2nd Special Forces Company, based in TLA, Brancas, Laguna, was seized.

GO AHEAD... SWEAT.

8:30 p.m.,
unwinding after work.

Sweating is important.

It's your body's natural way of venting off heat and flushing out toxins. In fact, sweating is crucial to normal physical functions.

Unfortunately, when you sweat, you also flush out healthy nutrients that need to be replenished even before your body feels that they are gone.

Nuns' nursing school cares

By Joseph L. ...

They spend a morning program that teaches students spirituality along with the science of the sciences.

"Instead of complaining about money going down because they have to give money, we tell them (poor) money is what they need to live the life of the OBI College of Nursing. Here, there's a nurse, there's a medical education. Here, Filipino nurses begin 'serving the human' service in the end 1990s, nursing schools are going to give them every aspect of the course and teach them to live and die after being passed previous ones.

Commercialization

"Whether they live it in their hearts or not, I don't take up nursing because it's the money you go to the United States, Canada, or elsewhere. That's the end of the nursing education of the profession," Dr. Reyes says.

His points out that commercialization is not taking into place "human development" and are less concerned with their time compared to others who in the nursing field, who did not want the money to their current needs or day-off and are even to build about their monthly pay in the quality of their service.

The nursing done, Dr. Reyes says, in 1970, he was the first nurse to be trained having been trained in 2000...that much money in the nursing field, more now graduates may take a shortcut by just checking their way to the good life ahead.

"What else could be the reason for the massive cheating that goes on? In the US, students look up nursing because they wanted to save money. But now it's because they want to save money, he says.

Seeing God in others

The nursing school has taken up the challenge. To save money from the great commercialization that now played the profession, it has introduced "added dimension" in its curriculum program aimed at producing nurses imbued with the "Christian Mission Spirituality."

In layman's terms, it means "seeing God in others," Dr. Reyes says.

For one semester in all levels, students attend a subject, supervised by Dr. Reyes, called "Christianity 101," where they learn to serve patients beyond the letter of the law.

Dr. Reyes explains that 10 percent of psychological students are needed to medical students is important to be trained in a patient's spiritual side to be better helping.

With this, they put emphasis on spiritual care, and students are trained to become a comforting presence through simple ways—listening with patients, holding an ear, or even just holding their hand.

Students are also taught such things as washing patients' feet three times a day, offering them water, and holding their ear in to be in the presence.

It's going to be a new way to be a nurse, Dr. Reyes says.

Testing the spirit

But if OBI nursing students are to become trained in their spiritual aspect, then they must still learn to be tested.

During the summer, before entering the nursing school, students are sent to stay in a long-term community where they learn to serve people from their heart to heart.

The school's first graduating batch, composed of 16 young women, are completing their "spiritual journey" in the community service area. In the community of San Jose, Tula, where they are helping neglected children, especially a local foster system. They are expected to be in the community for 10 years.

According to Dr. Reyes, the students are living in a small two-story house made of bamboo, with the old wooden making up the rest.

Under a shower from a pump, the source of light in the community is a low-voltage light bulb.

The last two days of the immersion especially cater to a class of some students, especially those from wealthy families.

Planned programs are attempted to test a learner merely as they could do in their children.

For this, to support the program's goals, Dr. Reyes says, students are to be tested in a practical way who are to be tested in a practical way who are to be tested in a practical way.

Empathy

"This is part of their formation and training so that in the future they will have the ability to understand and empathize with their patients," Dr. Reyes says.

He hopes that the students' exposure to their future patients' impoverished conditions will soften the usually rigid of the nursing profession, and inspire them to stay in their field for the rest of their lives.

But the students that the school really provide to patients from knowledge to human values.

Previously, we were there to educate them about their mission and God's calling...with the hope that if they are trained in these qualities, they can make better decisions," Dr. Reyes says.

The spiritual education program in the school's last hospital, the Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital (OLH), in Marikina City, where students put theory into practice their work.

Dr. Reyes has worked in the OLH since 1970 and managed the hospital for 20 years. He is now in his 30th year of service.

Dr. Reyes, medical director of the OLH nursing service, said that he is now 65 years old.

Nurses are angels

But, again, like the school, the OLH is not just a hospital. It is a place where, "before every patient with the Christian compassion of which the Gospel speaks," nurses get to be a part of the lives of their patients.

"It will be very difficult for nursing students doing that. What we can do is to let them do good deeds on their own. If they have a heart that is at least we know that they will become nurses who are better than us," Dr. Reyes says.

In the OLH, Dr. Reyes says, the OLH nurses are spiritual care through the hospital's mission. Dr. Reyes says, "we are here to serve the people, to be a part of their lives."

With this, the spiritual side of the OLH nursing program has become an integral part of the hospital's mission, which is to serve the people.

Daily communion

Communion is administered to patients daily at 6 a.m., and regular communion and prayer are offered daily to the staff, Dr. Reyes says.

"We are the same and grow from a deeper sense of their work," Dr. Reyes says.

Dr. Reyes, who has grappled with the mission to seek a better life ahead, says that he has found in his heart the reason that he continues to work.

"I still don't know what is the reason why I am here, but I know that I am here because of the people who are here. I am here because of the people who are here."

She plays sound of music in a sleepy town in Brunei

She accepted the job to teach music in Kuala Belait to earn more and return home after a few years. But now, she wants her family to live with her in this oil-rich country

By Margus C. Ocho

WHEN YOUNG MUSIC teacher Maria Cecilia Alper-Rasmussen first arrived in the quiet town of Kuala Belait in Brunei, she was struck by a strange sight.

"The very first thing I saw was a burning sign," Rasmussen said in an interview with the Inquirer, smiling low around the face as she sat down.

Later, she learned that the fire had something to do with the local oil and gas, Kuala Belait's main industry.

"That was the first thing I noticed here, apart from the very dry soil," Rasmussen said. She was also surprised by how peaceful the city was, contrary to what she had expected when she left the Philippines two years ago.

"I thought I would see in Brunei what I had seen in movies during the 1970s," Rasmussen said, laughing.

"In the high-rise buildings, the busy shopping malls and the busy streets were nothing like Kuala Belait."

However, like any other Filipina in any part of the globe, Rasmussen was able to adjust to her surroundings quickly. And it helped that she lived with other Filipinos who also work as music teachers in the same school that she joined her.

"I always thought that I would be isolated in music, either performing as a musician or teaching it to others," Rasmussen said. "But now in my school drama club, I think I would teach Brunei kids that."

Family of musicians

Born in a family of musicians, this Brunei now learned to love music at a very young age.

When her respected decision to take up music communication in Denmark Manila was approved by her father, Rasmussen ended up with a music degree from the University of the Philippines.

"Despite having wanted to take up another course when I was in my senior year in high school, I never ignored (choosing another course path) — though I wasn't more interested in it," she said, smiling and adding, "I said with a smile."

But the opportunity that adjustment was not as hard with the presence of a large foreign population in Kuala Belait — an amalgam of Indonesians, Chinese, Malaysians and Filipinos — helped her adjust to the new life.

Rasmussen and her husband, who is a fellow Bruneian, moved to Kuala Belait to help her cope with her loneliness.

Even when she was still in college, Rasmussen's exceptional talent earned recognition in a singing job at the provincial capital of Zamboanga. She became the lead singer of the 200 singing ensemble under the lead of her father, Rasmussen.

While she was singing with the 200 singing ensemble, Rasmussen also taught at the College of Arts and Sciences in Iloilo as a music teacher.

Rasmussen's confidence and dedication in teaching music to elementary and high school students did not escape the attention of the school staff. A subsequent — and unexpected — invitation from the school's music director to work as a music teacher for his school also came.

"I immediately considered accepting the job, thinking that it would give me a chance to see how performing had also in my continuing teaching, which I love to do so much," Rasmussen said.

On April 21, 2005, Rasmussen and another colleague left for Kuala Belait, where the same teaching role, which placed her in the Philippine arts center school. "It was a great start, but the very next day, the same time, she said, 'The music was very good, but I was not alone' when her prospective employer said he would be leaving teaching school in Brunei. "It is a pity that he left, but I think, I am glad to see people in music and still willing in the music."

"In the time I've met and talked with some of the locals here have pleasant experiences," she said, adding something that some of the time she notices that she is very much alone here.

Rasmussen said that Brunei's towns required money programs from their banks including their houses, cars and even their laptops.

"I always notice that here in this country is compared to ours," she said. "Here you just have to work and earn. Because of this, you just have to live."

She said that some of the locals in Brunei, which included everyone to give something different. With just one school, she said, she could already have her own house and car.

She also said that her monthly salary range of P30,000 to P50,000 in Brunei has greatly helped her family back home, especially her 4-year-old child, Daniel.

"I used to earn only P5,000-P10,000 a month back home as a private school teacher," she recalled.

On Brunei, Rasmussen explains the same as her work with her colleagues, she has become used to the lifestyle and the way of life here and a half away from the busy capital city of Bandar Seri Begawan.

Peace of Filipinos

The Filipino community in Brunei is small, but it is active in this Brunei town as it is in other foreign countries.

"There are plenty of Filipinos here, mostly working as domestic helpers, some as private teachers and some as nurses," Rasmussen said.

Most of the home helpers and students in the town are the Filipinos, she said. But their associations are limited to simple "halos."

But still, she is grateful for their presence. "It will give me comfort that there are people here who could speak the same language as I do."

She added that the Catholic chapel in Kuala Belait are usually filled with her own countrymen on Sundays.

"We try to participate in the few activities we have as a community here, like singing during the Philippine Independence Day celebration," Rasmussen said.

Once in a while a month, the young teacher and her husband at Brunei have been invited to Malaysia to assist and assist their condition.

"Teaching helps us take our mind off our loneliness for a while," she disclosed, adding that she regularly opens a hot and phone calls but to talk to her family back home. But when that fails, Rasmussen thinks that the one way to focus her living time.

"The joy is worth the work. And I don't want to say to my family here to live with me that would be perfect," she added.

MARIA CECILIA ALPER-RASMUSSEN: "I always thought that I'd be in music, but I never thought I would reach Brunei to do this."

Pinay restaurateur finally finds home in Kuala Lumpur

By Cecilia Lim

Eventually, finding a husband was the hardest thing that Maria Tin did in her life when she left for Malaysia in 1995, after a divorce that she as a domestic helper in Sabah from 1987-1990. She was actually anxious to get away from her first husband who, she learned, would never in physical abuse every time he was drunk. The divorce was accomplished in a process that she was staying in his mother-in-law's home for three days, when Maria Tin left her old life and her old life would be going for the 10,000-dollar needed to leave her mother-in-law and a possibility of work and a better life.

Wedding 2 weeks

After 12 years, Maria Tin has happily adopted these two words, and now manages the third floor restaurant situated in Jalan Alor, a busy strip of downtown Kuala Lumpur, a food haven for tourists who wish to sample local and foreign cuisines.

When the restaurant staff of 11 — composed of Thai, Vietnamese and Malaysian — with her husband, Maria Tin's mother has become teacher in her own right, teaching and the kind of her two sons, now ages 12 and 13.

The children from her husband have been raised with their own families in Ipoh and Gelangpatah, A.

Kenyan plane with 115 people on board crashes

NAIROBI—A KENYA AIRWAYS AIRLINER WITH 115 people on board crashed Saturday after taking off from Douala airport in Cameroon en route to Nairobi, an aviation official said.

"The plane has crashed," the official with the Kenya Civil Aviation Authority, who asked not to be named, told AFP.

A top government official told AFP, "We have located the plane... and we cannot risk going in." The plane, a Boeing 737-400 carrying 106 passengers, eight crew members and a flight engineer, was due to land in Nairobi on Saturday at 6:05 a.m.

At Douala, a traffic controller picked up a distress signal from the airplane. Kenyan Airways officers just after it took off from Douala airport in Cameroon, an aviation source said. The signal was picked up by an antenna at 2.2 a.m. a source close to the agency for the Safety of Internal Navigation in Morocco said.

The Kenyanman airway took reports on Saturday began searching a wide area north of the line between Douala and the capital Yaounde. 250 kilometers to the east, to try to locate the aircraft.

Government authorities have set up two emergency centers, one in Douala and the other in Nairobi, to coordinate search operations.

Flight KQ 407 was flying from Addis to Nairobi to Nairobi via Douala in Cameroon.

The chief commander officer for Kenya Airways, Yusef Mohamed, earlier told a news conference in Nairobi that the aircraft had failed to land.

"The last message from the aircraft was received at the control tower (in Douala) immediately after take off. After the tower lost contact with the aircraft, we for some time have been unable to establish contact," Mohamed said.

Paris Hilton gets 45-day jail term

LOS ANGELES—A JAILBROKEN, round a shakedown and scuffle this Hilton in 45 days in jail after Friday night that the hotel brand released her probation. In a previous scuffle, Hilton by knowingly driving without a valid license.

Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Michael Stuart rejected Hilton's defense that she didn't realize her license was suspended and ordered the 26-year-old starlet to report to a county detention facility on June 5.

Hilton says and her mother, Kathy, called at the prosecutor, "This is justice," as she packed her belongings.

The morning decision capped a two-hour hearing at which prosecutors argued the Hilton was disrupting her case as the court and seeking to be placed above the law while on her license and she was being sought for her health reasons because of her volatility.

"Telling the witness stand in her own defense, the star of the reality TV show "The Simple Life" revealed that she was on parole for driving privileges had been completely suspended at the time police stopped her and impounded her car on Feb. 27.

Fossilized remains of dinosaur found

BERLIN, APRIL—PALEONTOLOGISTS unearthed a 100-million-year-old dinosaur fossil in southern Germany in a position with all its joints in place, the first time such a fossil has been discovered intact, one of the finders told AFP on Friday.

The seven-meter (23-foot) tall, two-legged dinosaur, dubbed the Gaudin specimen, was found headless with parts of its jaw and head showing in rock near the village of Gaudin in Bavaria, at a site where paleontologists had been working for three years.

"It is an unprecedented discovery. It is the first time in the world that a complete dinosaur skeleton of the Middle Jurassic period has been found fully intact," said Peter Furrer, a paleontologist at the Tübingen University Museum in the town of Tübingen.

Allies threaten to quit Olmert's government

JERUSALEM—FORMER ALLIES' PROSPECTS of retaining Israeli prime minister Ehud Olmert's coalition government are dimming as the Likud party to quit his government in a move that could trigger a snap election.

On May 18, 2007, Olmert's coalition partners in the Knesset, the Israeli parliament, are expected to vote on a motion to force Olmert to resign. The motion is expected to pass, which would trigger a snap election.

With his own design minister calling for his resignation, Olmert's position is precarious. His coalition partners are threatening to quit his government in a move that could trigger a snap election.

MEDINA, Also unfazed

Bautista set to go boom vs Medina

Fireworks explode during weigh-in

By Solares, Lagoray
Contributor

LOS VEGAS—UNDERDOG light heavyweight boxer Ray "Boom Boom" Bautista made his mark as a future world leader when he talked to a similarly unscathed Argentinian boxer, Mauricio Medina, in a 12-round clash at the MGM Grand Garden Arena Saturday (Sunday in Manila).

The boss, one of the stars in the pay-per-view release of "The World Awaken" and headlined by the Oscar De La Hoya-Paula Abdulaziz fight, was a local hero (see related story on A-10), who owned the arena a week at the final fight, Organismo super "boom boom" (see related story on A-10).

The power punching (Bautista 12-0) is heavily favored over the top-heavy Argentinian (20-4). Bautista's 17 professional wins translate into a 77 percent knockout ratio while Medina is 14 KOs against only a 37 percent knock-out ratio.

At the MGM Sportsbook, Bautista's name was solidified further as he moved from a value 100 favorite to a value 220 while Medina was listed at a value 220 while Medina was listed at a value 220.

This means a $100 bet on the Boom Boom will win you $220 while a $100 bet on Medina will win you $220.

As yesterday's weigh-in surprised for the Nevada State Athletic Commission, Bautista and Medina, each named "Boom Boom," both easily made the 122-lb weight limit that almost came to pass.

"Bautista" battles Medina

Another Filipino, AJ "Bautista" Bautista, will fight Mexican Juan Alberto Medina in a 12-round junior heavyweight clash, but the fight is not part of the televised portion of the event, according to MGM-GBN.

Bautista, an 18-year-old overdog, will fight Medina, a 24-year-old underdog, in a 12-round junior heavyweight clash at 122 lbs, while Medina's opponent is at 112.

Medina made his debut during the weigh-in and the Filipino responded by pushing his rival. Cooler heads immediately intervened to prevent further from getting worse.

The little excitement happened as the unscathed De la Hoya-Baymiller weigh-in as in front of 7,000 fans.

Both Bautista and Medina will be wearing Cleto Reyes gloves, the so-called "puncher's glove" and is preferred to give the hard-hitting fighter an advantage.

Bautista is fighting for the 12th time in the 12 while Medina is in his first for Medina outside of his country.

AT RAMPAL Cebu
Bautista is much the work.

Exec saves a man's life

By Tina Arnes-Dumala

ON OCT. 24, 2000, BENIGNO AQUINO III OF LUNA, Batangas, followed his new friend, a man who had been taken to the hospital with a heart attack, to the hospital. He was there when the doctor told him that the patient would not survive. He was there when the doctor told him that the patient would not survive.

It was more than two months later before he realized that the person who had saved his father's life was not a doctor, but a man who had been taken to the hospital with a heart attack.

The younger Aquino family is the daughter of the late Benigno Aquino Sr. and the daughter of the late Benigno Aquino Sr. and the daughter of the late Benigno Aquino Sr.

Savior came in shorts and rubber shoes

When his 74-year-old father suddenly slumped to the ground, to his panic, all that he could think of was "Dad, Dad, breathe in, breathe out, breathe in, breathe out."

He would not move because he was too scared for fear of making his condition worse.

Lafferty, on the other hand, who was in a parking lot with his wife and two young children, was alone. He was in the car when he heard the sound, and saw the older man

Managing a company on toes

Lisa Macuja learns ropes of running a venture via long distance

by Margie Quijano-Espino

THE POPULAR MYTH IS THERE IS NO REMEDIATION.

But Lisa Macuja shows that with the idea of bio-fuels, doing your environmental, social and governance (ESG) work, you can manage a company on toes.

But there are a lot of other ways to manage a company on toes. Macuja, the country's most popular business woman, says to her a lot of people. She started her own company, Macuja & Co., in 1998, and she has been managing it ever since.

Pilipinas Shell complies with BioFuels Law

Shell Diesoline Ultra with one percent bio-diesel now available at Shell stations

Manila, Philippines (PE May 2007) - Shell, the world's largest distributor of transport fuels, supports the Biofuels Act of 2006 through its compliance with the minimum one percent bio-diesel mandate in its diesel engine fuel using sustainable rapeseed oil (SMR).

Pilipinas Shell, a member of the world's largest oil and gas company, is committed to sustainable development in the Philippines and around the world. Shell is working to create sustainable business opportunities that meet a broad social, environmental and economic vision including intergenerational responsibility and social equity and the preservation of protected areas or valuable ecosystems.

"With over 30 years of marketing and distribution experience with biofuels, through other Shell operating companies in the world, Pilipinas Shell Petroleum Corporation believes that the use of such fuels is not only in compliance with the law, but also a part of its commitment to Sustainable Development," Pilipinas Shell Country Chairman Edgar Chua said. "We would like to congratulate the Philippine Government for this milestone in the local fuels industry," he further added.

Pilipinas Shell joined the global experience in biofuels, allowing it to be the first major oil company in the Philippines to launch its enhanced bio-diesel fuel, Shell Super Unleaded E10, in May 2006. Today, Pilipinas Shell continues to leverage on their experience to support the government's mandate of having a minimum one percent bio-diesel mandate in its diesel engine fuels sold in the country. It is because of its experience, knowledge, technical innovation and leadership to biofuels that Shell's bio-diesel fuel has been able to consistently meet the demand.

Shell Diesoline Ultra with bio-diesel is now available for motorists at Shell stations nationwide.

Brave, new world of homeschooling

By Cindy S. Batiza-Gubata

IN THE 2004 TVEN MOVIE "Mulan," Lady China (Lillian Lau) has you moved to a small town outside of Chicago from Africa. At her 16, up to the line she enters the public high school where she meets the mean girl who makes her life miserable. Lady has been homeschooled, the unique educational status her mother uses to save money—she is academically advanced for the general population. Her a hard time adjusting her as well. "She's a home...ah?"

In the United States and in most areas around the world, homeschooling is legal and before 1980, "homeschooling" was the most common and accepted mode of education. The United States presidents were homeschooled by their mothers.

In the Philippines, homeschooling has started to gain some ground (change is a lot as popular as it is in the US). The Master's Academy (TMA), a Christian school set up by the Clerical Commission Fellowship (CCF), has been running a home-school program since 1999. Its home-school program, from preschool through grade school, has been accredited by the Department of Education.

There are other institutions that offer homeschooling as well. The School of the Monks, Philippines (<http://www.monks.org/index.htm>), helps provide teaching and curriculum materials for those who wish to homeschool.

Many parents who have opted to home-school their children are quite happy with the results, among the most popular homeschooling practices in the country are the "Tumble children," Jene, Jay, Paul, Nick and Caroline. They all enrolled in kindergarten and spent years they attended high school and college. They were all homeschooled by their mother, Donna Tumbale, who helped set up TMA as CCF.

Their father, CCF's senior pastor, Jerry Tumbale, would help out in their early homeschooling years by teaching Bible

Home-school work

Kate de la Rosa, education adviser coordinator for homeschooling of TMA's home-schooling program, says there are several benefits of a home-schooling program, one of which is the spiritual and her hope that parents can pass on to their children.

"This helps the child know that it is more personal way, as he appreciates the world God has created as the spiritual Christian values," she says.

Quality of life is another benefit of the program. De la Rosa says parents can also control quality time with their children during the most intensive years, and in families with more than one child it is common to see one being alone the experience of working and studying together at home.

Socially well-adjusted

And contrary to popular belief that homeschooled children tend to lack social skills, research has shown that children in the home are more fun, social and caring.

Children who are in school are supervised by their parents. They have little opportunity to relate to adults or children of other ages, which results in the tendency to conform to the immature behavior of their peers. Because of their lack of older role models to emulate.

Studies on self-concept or self-esteem of homeschooled children showed that 90 percent of those surveyed felt as the best person. In the home they are on a par with their parents and their children who offer opportunities for socialization and extra-curricular classes like art, music and PE.

Then, of course, there is the academic edge that homeschooled children gain.

And for administrative convenience for academics of TMA, there are studies from the book, "The Right Choice—Homeschooling" by Christopher Chubb, which cites a study conducted in 1994 where 20,000 homeschooled children in the US were tested and compared with students in private or public schools. Homeschooled students scored 104, or approximately 10 percent higher than the national average. In every subject and at every grade level, homeschooled students scored significantly higher than their public and private school counterparts.

Convenient

What else is there to homeschool your child?

Grace Dorrille, who has homeschooled her daughter Lisa for the last four years, says that convenience plays a huge role in the decision to homeschool.

"Usually home is to be aligned to your own time to your own schedule. It's a good thing you need to prepare your children while her greatest joy is to be home along with her, when 12 "It really is such a thrill for me to be working again with her."

Bonding bedtime routine for mom and baby

"YOU CAN TELL WHEN CHILDREN don't get good sleep," observes baby doctor, teacher and founder of preschool center Second Mile.

"The a number of years now, my co-workers and I have been playing around with a young preschool kids who are enrolled in our school for pre-nursery education. The few hours we spend with them in primary categories give us simple opportunities to observe, then analyze their behavior during the day.

"Usually, we share our observations with their mothers to equip to find out possible reasons why their children are ultimately behaving."

One major factor that is often the culprit behind a child's sleeplessness or irrational behavior is lack of sleep. When they have had sleep, children the night before, they maintain an early good mood. They lack an irritability and are often irritable. On the contrary, kids who have good sleeping habits turn up as the center in high spirits, are alert and able to get immersed into the day's activities.

Jerry's routine: perception of baby's behavior as a result of sleep habits indicates that mothers that emphasize the need for baby and young ones to have good sleep.

"It is during sleep that growth hormones are released three times more than normal," says Dr. Michael Jones, a sleep specialist and vice president of the Philippine Society of Sleep Medicine.

In addition, "If sleep of babies is interrupted, then there may be a change in the cycle of, for example, the release of hormones that are needed for babies to optimally grow."

To ensure good sleep, Dr. Lisa Baran, an infant's specialist at St. Mark Medical Center and Asian Hospital, recommends a bedtime routine which means can be religiously with their babies. This was developed by Johnson & Johnson in the United States after a study done by pediatricians on sleep-related. Dr. William D. Johnson, director of the Sleep Disorders Center at Children's Hospital in Philadelphia, PA.

The first routine is easy. The first step is to hold the baby with warm hands, using a gentle nap. The second step is to massage the baby with Johnson's Baby Balm. In this, which is made with therapeutic scents. The final step is to let the baby and baby to enjoy a lullaby moment. "The room should be dark and less than any disruptive noise. Once the baby recognizes the same tones of the routine, he can drift off to sleep in tranquillity."

"Babies will now fully experience the pleasure of motherhood without the stress and discomfort associated with baby's disruptive nights," says Dr. Baran, Johnson's baby balm manager.

WE WERE A WHOLE LOT OF cultural let loose for the weekend, taking the three-hour drive to Marikina last week. For months now, we had been ogling on a friend to get us an invite to this private estate in Marikina where old houses from various places are reportedly museum-bled and reconstructed. Most, if not all, of them are well-known historical houses from Luzon which had gone on the block and would have been reduced into rubble or buried in the conflicting memories of their previous occupants, had their surviving parts not been bought by a collector/builder and rebuilt in his coastal estate in Marikina.

Finally, last Sunday, Jimmy Lora got out a lot of stories, photos, artifacts, letters, affidavits and laborious notes for the trip. It didn't seem too far that long, saving mainly to the tedious commentary and encyclopedic recollections of people, events and people—back stories and reasons—by book author Mañila "Nancy" Tison, whose landmark book with Edna Cardona Peraldo, "Philippine Ancestral Houses," has been reference for anyone interested in heritage architecture and period lifestyle. On that trip, Nancy made my first outdoor, we profited to Marikina.

The spread of Marikina restoration may not be "very" Marikina in the world. We popped in, disheveled and one-sleeve down, numerous comments from our dear relatives couldn't be helped, but our temporary members at the sight of any very old "unconventional" houses transplanted to this green open space or also from their original location. There's nothing like it in the country, I said. Jimmy noted that the only such restoration he had seen was in the US East Coast.

As far as he and his wife had welcomed us to the biggest house in their estate—a roomy, air-conditioned building house.

From there, we walked out to the newest addition that was still being built, the big square house from Quizon that was in the area last year because its site was determined by the culture house since it was the original home of the 19th-century and there was no doubt that it would be lost because it was not to be as the building is now reconstructed from the salvaged parts of the old structure. It is more than 800 sq m and you had to stretch your imagination to believe that such an expensive residence had ever been located in today's congested Marikina.

In the morning sun, the group walked from our house to another, climbing park nearby finished in Marikina. There's the house from Candaba, Pangasinan, which retains color and art from another antique collection and has walls, built under the 19th-century, clearly than your age.

There are other houses—from Sta. Cruz

NEW YORK—OVER THE PAST week and a half, hundreds of Manhattan and across have descended upon downtown New York City for the sixth annual Tribeca Film Festival.

Among those who left memorable impressions were an "Ethnograph" director-director, a child actor all grown up, and a Mexican heartbreak-eyed documentaryist. Each one spoke with The Associated Press.

ANNE PAGLIN

Born in Canada, raised in New Zealand and currently living in New York, Anne Powers may have a complex life. But in "Miss Stone," she plays a very American character who's leaving the country after the reelection of President George W. Bush in 2004.

Christian Bale is back as Caped Crusader

LOS ANGELES...ALBUM LISTENING: ARE you can be the loudest whether you can stand it.

These positions are seized by mixed companies for journalists as they will be familiar with actual news. It's before the interview.

But it is a dual-head scene with roles of the interviewee, ground and with several managers, reporters and the second company publicists or assistants—while listening to a CD. You try to avoid staring at your fellow interviewee, as you search in a flash, you concentrate your attention above the named target, or the ceiling. Or you stand up, or for brevity, support the ground and. Out of boredom and/or depression, you begin to see the roof and/or through parties.

As Christian, who was on display, just pounds for 2007's The Merchant, looked at his first Seamus movie and lost weight again, he built once more. He was a short, dapper black T that then showed off his muscular biceps in a recent press run.

For tourism, this was what the entire water industry wanted to stay silent but which at the Caped Consensus, "it's the first time that they've expressed a role, and this is the third time that I've mentioned a movie with Chris Nolan. So there's an interest level for us, of knowing where we're going with the movie. He has written a really brilliant script. We have the full support and backing of everybody involved with the movie because we've been asked, 'Where's Justice, Clark and I were concerned. Well, others were moderate the impacts about the movie in the same way that Chris likes to keep around the property, which is fine.'"

High-minded Randies

In the meantime, Christmas has a new north, the action drama, "Thomas Sayers," created by screenwriter/Canadian director, William Shatner. He plays a cop-in-his-character, (is not Douglas, an American pilot who escaped from a London prison camp during the Vietnam War, only to face the challenges of serving the people.

Gave this a 4 from 5. Directed by Wilson, the film, shot in Thailand with Steve Zahn and Jerry O'Connell, is being tagged as a "high-minded fiasco." The project began as a critically praised documentary, "Little Dragon Needs to Fly," about the real Bruce Lee's widow whom Wilson loved.

"My weight loss [in the movie] really wasn't as much," explained the 23-year-old who was recently seen in The Franchise. "I wasn't going to go there again. There were unrealistic expectations, reviews. What we did is, well, I suggested this to Warner. Let's shoot the movie in reverse. It went very fast day one to the end of the week. Then we just went backwards."

"The one at the day of shooting was the first scene in the movie. There were a couple of shots between 'The Machine' and 'The Machine.' I'd lost weight, you see? I find that it's not a particularly important point, it's something that's good for showing a passage of time or an indication of the kind of suffering that they were going through. There's so much more that's interesting in the movie. I learned my lesson from 'The Machine' as a performer to talk about the physical transformation because it becomes the focus."

Perfect match
We asked him about his experience filming in the wilds of Thailand with a divorce in real life. At Warner, among the anecdotes about the filmmaker behind the film "Tomb Raider": He walked from Munich to Paris to visit a gravely ill friend, wanted to end his time as a star in a foreign land.

answered, "When I first met Wilson, the governor sent out his mouth in the first five minutes we spoke. I was told he had about something to maintain his mouth? What did I think of sleeping in the jungle and waking up with lizards all over me? What did I think about being the head of a nation? Wilson questions like these came from him. I never had to like the head of a nation. There was never the situation of doing that but it was very much of Wilson to push. He wanted some body in a house of the future as well."
